Colin & Kate Dart

3rd July - 29th July 2011

The Innovation Centre Rennes Drive, Exeter EX4 4RN

Kate's work explores the theories of Chaos. The drawings investigate chaos from order and the reversion of the resulting chaos back into an ordered outcome. Simplicity leads to complexity. Each drawing stems from a measured and identical starting point while the variants of hand eye coordination and the different mediums used lead to the spread of chaotic undulations in each individual line. These undulations then create a rippled yet seemingly coherent and ordered surface. The pieces on display in this exhibition are focused on the fluctuations of the medium used on a constant surface, and with the effect of chaos on the viewers interpretation when the order of the starting point is hidden by the way in which the work is displayed.

Colin's work has been focused on or utilising digital media for nearly a decade, as a direct result, recent practice has looked to investigate the effect that this has had on the output of the creative process.
This body of work explores the creative transition between digital and traditional media. Focusing on content that has been forced through a cycle of hand craft and digitisation several times over.
The final work continues to be recognisable, albeit far removed from the original manifestation.
